Wednesday, March 30, 2022
6:30-7:00 pm Informal meet and greet (optional)
7:00-8:00 pm film discussion
RSVP ebha.secretary@gmail.com

Discuss what role (if any) a non-prescribing therapist has when speaking with a client about psychiatric medication

Discuss how the emphasis on medication over the past few decades has impacted the way we and our clients think about psychotherapy

Share reactions to the opinion expressed in the film that the DSM and medication marketing “disease-ify” human experience.

Kevin Riley, LCSW is a psychotherapist. He sees his work as reducing suffering by helping people connect more fully to themselves and to the world. He has been serving individuals and families since 1994 and has been in Corvallis since 2000. He holds an MSW from the University of Washington and he is a Level III CADC.

Previously, he was Clinical Director of the Catherine Freer Wilderness Therapy Program, supervising a team of wilderness therapists and traveling the country to provide training on a variety of clinical issues. Outside of the office, he enjoys mountain biking, rafting, writing, reading, travel and any excuse to be with family and friends among large trees and living water.
